Very good to see some people outside the immediate Cryptocommunity involved in projects. This looks very interesting, also because of the broad angles and experiences of the team. Was briefly reminded by Alexander Kluge's DCTP (<http://www.dctp.tv>). A TV production company in the late '80s and early '90s who had a similar orthogonal approach at the field (far more limited though).

Very impressed by the steady, clear and open vision Joe Lubin perpetuates over the last years in Ethereum.

Love it! Excellent articulation of the vision and real-life, real-people use cases, as usual. Good point about the timing being immediate, as opposed to the 1-3 years it may take for the general population to interact directly with other services on the EWC platform.

You could consider a bounty (in ETH, naturally) for 10% improvement in the recommendation engine to surface user choices, as Netflix did. But then actually USE it because your mission is so different (not to mention your cost structure)!

This just feels a bit too evangelical to be a mainstream success to me. Singularity-based sci fi and documentaries on Ethereum are not going to pull audiences or attract content.

Could you elaborate as why you think so?
